Wide Search Still On for The Plotters of Obregon's Assassination

CENSORSHIP NOW LIFTED

Extraordinary Sessions of Congress Postponed Until July 30th

MEXICO CITY, July 20.—(INS)—All Mexico today began a nine day period of mourning to honor the memory of the departed leader, President Elect General Alvaro Obregon.

The government has lifted the veil of censorship imposed a few hours after General Obregon was assassinated. The extraordinary session of Congress, set originally for today, has been postponed until July 30.

The purpose of this session had originally been to take up various reform laws backed by the Obregonists, but it is now believed that at the session of the Obregonists will attempt to push through legislation which will permit President Calles to remain in office for two years more.

The backers of the late leader plan to rush through a transitory article to the Amendment passed last year providing for a six-year term for president. The amendment, as drawn up, contains no date of taking effect. According to the plans of the Obregonists, the transitory clause will meet the date as November 30, and thus make the amendment apply to President Calles.

General Antonio Rios Zertuche, chief of Mexico City police, issued a statement last night in which he charged Catholic clergy with "responsibility for the crime."

He asserted that investigators already had procured evidence which would involve several members of the clergy. He said that he would soon make their names public as the "intellectual authors" of the assassin and would reveal the nature of the evidence against them.

A wide search is still being made for further suspects. There have been many arrests. Twenty of those arrested were nuns, it is reported.

The assassin, Jose De Leon, will be given a regular trial by the tribunal, the police chief said. He did not indicate just how soon the trial would be completed, nor when the execution, which is certain to follow, would take place.

Four Members of Family Have Tonsils Removed

Four members of one family were operated upon at the Harriman Hospital, here, yesterday, for the removal of tonsils. The quartette is comprised of Mrs. Pauline Wasurke and her children, Nellie, Mamie and Walter. All are reported as doing nicely. The family lives at 284 Hayes street.

Miss Katherine Zack, who resides at 286 Hayes street, had her tonsils removed at the same institution yesterday.

Following treatment at the hospital Mrs. Maurice McIlvaine returned to her home in Morrisville on Thursday.

GRAHAM RIDDLES SMITH PLEA ON VOLSTEAD ISSUE; BRANDS IT AS UTTERLY FALSE

Congressman Calls Modification and Repeal Propaganda "Wild and Utterly False" — Declares Dry Democratic States of Solid South Would Be Sufficient to Upset the Tammany Program.

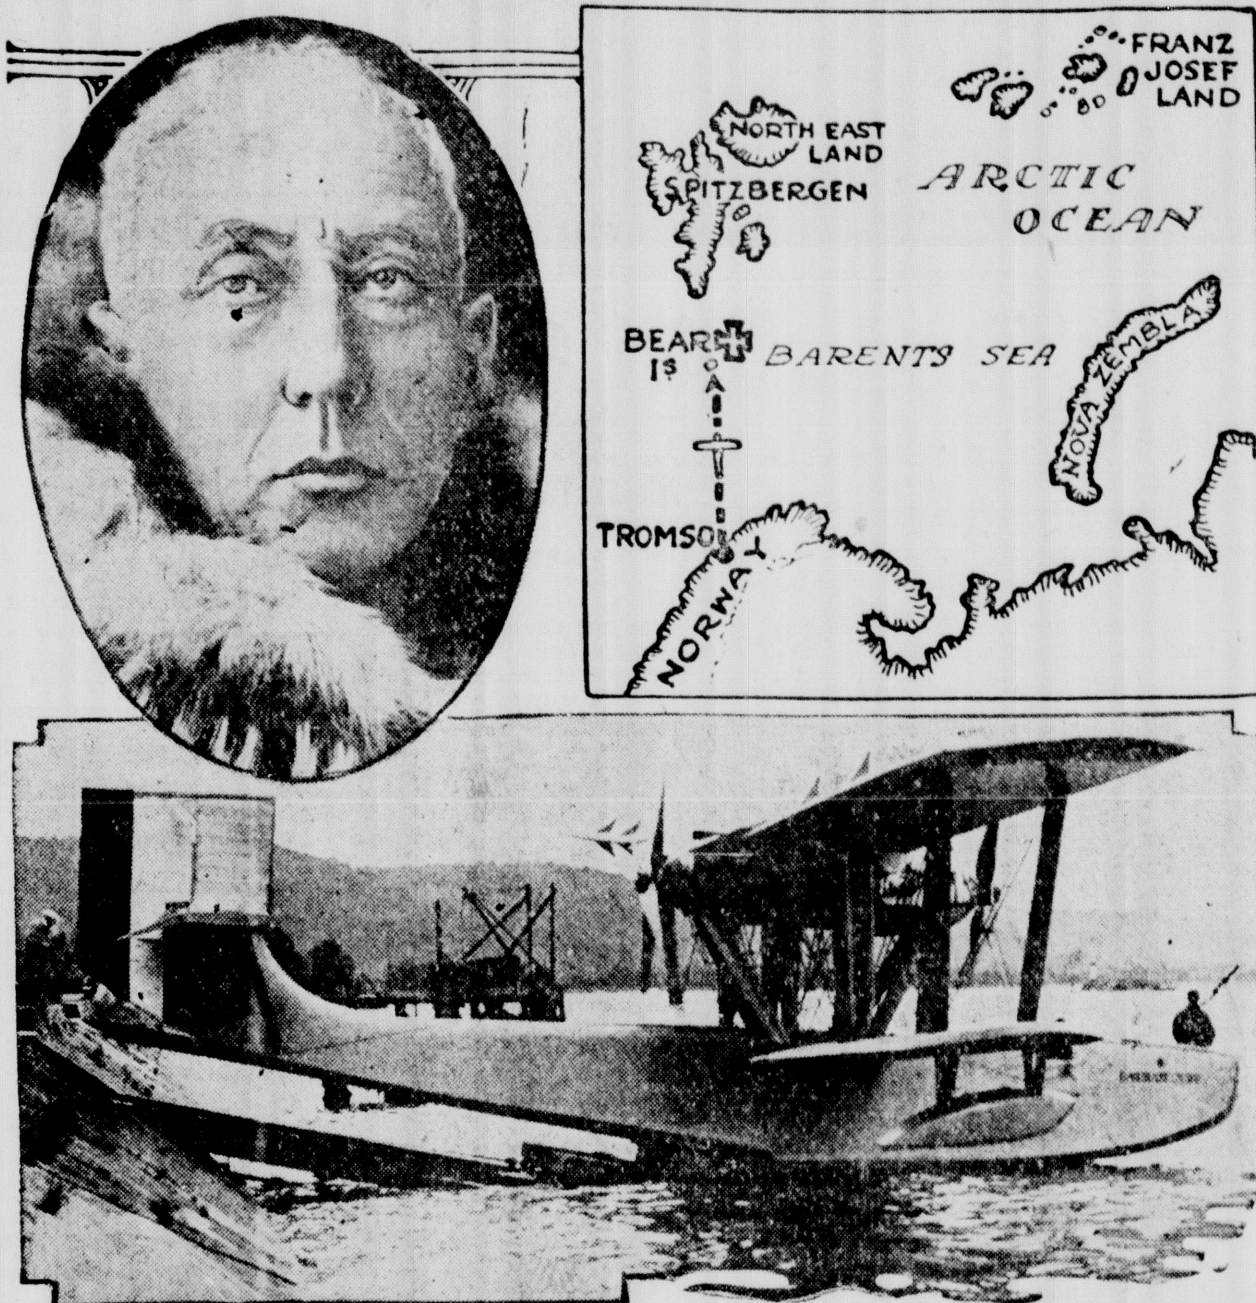

PHILADELPHIA, July 20.—Propaganda of the Tammany organization purporting to show that the election of Governor Alfred E. Smith to the Presidency would have the effect of bringing about a modification of the prohibition laws was denounced yesterday by Congressman George S. Graham, of the Second district, as "wild and utterly false."

Legislation affecting either the Eighteenth Amendment or the Volstead Act, Mr. Graham pointed out, must originate in Congress and he branded as misleading the suggestion that the President can in any way bring about a change in either the basic or the enabling act.

Congressman Graham is chairman of the House Judiciary Committee and successor of former Congressman Volstead in that post. Any new bills concerning the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment would have to pass through the body presided over by the Philadelphia Congressman. He discussed prohibition legislation in its relation to the Presidency from the viewpoint of an inexperienced legislator and the head of the committee that handles all bills in any way concerned with the prohibitory laws.

Conceding that it might be possible to wipe out the Republican minority in Congress, Mr. Graham declared that even in that event there would be no opportunity of achieving the modification so much desired by Governor Smith and John J. Raskob, the new

Find Amundsen Clue in Arctic

Just thirty days after Capt. Roald Amundsen (inset at left) was swallowed up in the Arctic, the Norwegian admiral learns that two fishermen on Bear Island came upon tracks of two wheels about six feet apart, running along about eighty feet to the edge of a precipice, a fur cap, a piece of a fur coat, and small pieces of broken wood.

The wireless station on Bear Island was the last to hear Amundsen's plane, a fact which would indicate that the explorer might have crashed so near the precipice that his plane continued into the sea below. Below, the plane in which the explorer and five companions set out from Tromsø on their search for Nobil.

Looking Forward To the Day When Air Will Be Cluttered With Aircraft

OTHER STATE NEWS

PITTSBURGH, July 20.—(INS)—Looking forward to the day when the air will be cluttered with all sorts of aircraft even as the roads have become cluttered with automobiles, Pittsburgh business men are today envisioning "The Golden Triangle" as the air metropolis of the world.

Here in the heart of the steel industry they dream of huge factories devoted to the production of planes. They vision experimental stations to aid in the progress of aviation and they dream of bringing to this air center meteorologists and expert scientists who will help direct the huge fleet of aircraft.

HULMEVILLE PASTOR IS TENDERED SURPRISE

Rev. Walter H. Canon Guest of Honor at Social Affair

GOLD PIECE PRESENTED

HULMEVILLE, July 20.—The Rev. Walter H. Canon, pastor of the Nazarene M. E. Church, was the guest of honor at a social affair given in the edifice here Wednesday night by various organizations connected with the church.

The affair, which was a total surprise to the honored individual, included a very interesting program: Piano solo, "Jack-O-Lantern," Miss Harriet Cox; vocal solo, "Somewhere a Voice is Calling," Miss Winifred A. Dicken; reading, Mrs. Emma Vansant; selection by the boys' trio, composed of Edwin Webster, Sidney Buckman, and Kimbal Faust.

Vocal solo, Mrs. Samuel K. Faust; organ selection, Miss Clara L. Hillick; vocal solo by Mrs. Jennie Halk, with "To You" given as an encore. Miss Clara Hillick was the accompanist for the vocal numbers.

The Rev. Joseph M. Fithian, of Philadelphia, gave a brief talk, and spoke of the excellent work carried on in this congregation by the Rev. Canon. Jesse C. Everitt was in charge of the program.

The pastor was called upon for a few remarks, following the presentation to him of a gold piece, the gift of those affiliated with the church.

Refreshments were served at long tables in the basement at the conclusion of the numbers.

TOUR THROUGH MAINE OFFERS MUCH PLEASURE

Many Places of Interest for Those Who Love Gypsy Trail

THE TRIP IS OUTLINED

Route Takes the Traveler Through Pretty Lake and Woodland Sections

For the motorists who enjoy following the gypsy trail, the Keystone Automobile Club in Bristol, "need information on good camp sites. There are 53 maintained by the state in Maine. Road conditions are good, although many of the roads are gravel."

From Bristol drive to Morrisville and across the bridge to Trenton. Continue on the Lincoln Highway to Newark. In order to avoid New York City traffic, drive north through Belleville, Carlstadt, Hackensack and Cresskill to Alpine, where the ferry to Yonkers is taken. Pass then, through White Plains to Port Chester, and turn left onto the Boston Post Road.

Follow the Post Road to New Haven, and continue on the Shore Road to New London, Providence and Boston. From Boston, drive north through Cambridge, Everett, Chelsea, Revere, Beverly, Ipswich, Newburyport and Rye Beach to Portsmouth. Many fine beaches will lure you for an ocean dip on this route.

Continue on across the Interstate Memorial Bridge to Kittery, Maine, and follow the Maine coast line all the way to Calais. Measured as an air-line route, the distance to Calais is 212 miles, but the actual distance, because of bays and indentations is about 2,500 miles. However, this trip is narrowed down to 543 miles.

The treaty between Russia and Japan was signed at Kittery, a United States Naval base, and the "Ranger," John Paul Jones' ship was launched nearby at Badger's Island. Pass on through York Harbor, Kennebunkport, Old Orchard Beach, and two Promenades to Portland.

Drive through Brunswick, Bath, Newcastle, Damariscotta, where old Colonial type houses can be seen, Rockland, Rockport, Northport, Belfast, Winterport and Hampden to Bangor, a distance of 241 miles from Portsmouth.

Cross the Penobscot River to Brewer and drive through East Holden to Ellsworth. Bear left through Hancock, Gouldboro, Millbridge, Harrington, Columbia Falls, Machias, where the first naval battle of the United States was fought, Whiting, Pembroke and Perry to Eastport, the most easterly city in the United States.

Here is famous Fort Sullivan, with an old powder house, a great point of interest with visitors. Follow the coast back to Perry and pass through Robbinston to Calais.

From Calais, drive through Baring, past Meddyhumps Lake to Wesley. Here the Air Line Road to Beddington and Aurora is met. Pass from Aurora through Amherst and Clifton back to Bangor.

From Bangor head into the lake country. Drive through Carmel and Etna to Newport, where Sebasticook Lake is located. Bear left through Pittsfield and continue south along the banks of the Kennebec River to Waterville. Turn right and pass through Oakland to the famous Belgrade Lakes district. This is one of the show places of the state.

From Belgrade, drive to Augusta, the capital of the state. From Augusta, bear right through Winthrop to Auburn. Drive south through Danville and Gray back to Portland.

For the return trip it is suggested that the motorist use the same route covered in the first part of the journey.

MANY FEATURES BOOKED FOR HOSPITAL LAWN FETE

Fashion Show, Boxing, Tricks of Magic and Dancing Acts to Be Given

A BILL OF BIG FEATURES

The Harriman Hospital lawn fete will be held again tonight and tomorrow night on the lawn of the hospital, Pond street and Wilson avenue. This big annual out door affair was booked for four nights last week but the weather was inclement and several of the features had to be postponed.

A fashion show by Smith Model Shop, Mill street, will be staged each night when the latest in fall creations will be displayed upon living models. The rain last Saturday night prevented Mr. Smith from giving this exhibition so he has arranged for it this evening and again tomorrow night. It is to be one of the features of the fete.

Then tonight Johnny Straffe, Bristol's well known boxer, will give a sparring exhibition with one of his partners. Straffe is a very clever local boy with the gloves and he is the idol of a large following of fans. The exhibition which he will give tonight is sure to please those who like to see good snappy boxing bouts.

Arthur Brooks, the magician, will be on the stage tonight and prepared to amuse and entertain those who are in attendance with his large list of clever tricks of magic. Brooks last week completely mystified his audience by the Hindu rope trick and the needle act. Despite the fact that Brooks was watched closely the on-lookers could not fathom how the tricks were done.

Some of Bristol's clever dancers will also feature on the bill tonight at the lawn fete. Several dancing numbers will be given upon the stage.

TRADE NOTES

While planning for their "bigger and better store," Smith's Model Shop owners have not been unmindful of those who have made the expansion of their store space necessary.

Therefore a gigantic sale of apparel has been planned, said sale commencing this morning. For the advantage of the public a most modern and up-to-date structure is to be built.

Women will delight in the dress sale which has already started. Those garments which formerly sold for a specified price may now be purchased two for the same cost.

Silk lingerie is to be had in every conceivable material and style, with princess slips, chemises, step-ins, bloomers, etc., in the aggregation.

The latest creations in felt hats are shown, all shades included. The dresses for little tots, the famous "Mitsi" frocks, are very attractive and laudably nicely. For the older girls there are to be had the "Lucette" frocks.

Silk hosiery, bed-clothing, bathing suits, boys' wash suits are also included. The location of this value-giving sale is 412 Mill street.

WILLS ESTATE TO RELATIVES AND TO CHURCH SOCIETIES

Isaac M. Hunsicker, Blooming Glen, Leaves Estate of $19,000.00

$15,000 PERSONAL PROP.

Will Directs $2,000 Be Placed On Interest for Mennonite Congregation

DOYLESTOWN, July 20.—An estate of $19,000 including $15,000 personal property is bequeathed to relatives, friends and religious organizations in the will of Isaac M. Hunsicker, who died at his home in Blooming Glen on July 3.

The will directs that $2,000 be placed on interest by the two executors of the will and that the income be paid to the Blooming Glen Mennonite congregation until such a time as the entire principal shall be needed for the repair, remodeling or rebuilding of the meeting house, when the entire sum shall be given the congregation.

A bequest of $500 was made to the Mennonite mission board at Souderton and $300 to the Rockhill Mennonite congregation in West Rockhill township. Bequests of $300 each are made to Vergie Stinley, Paul M. Hunsicker, Harley M. Hunsicker and Willard H. Shadinger as a token of remembrance. A house and lot in Blooming Glen was bequeathed to a son, Leidy D. Hunsicker. To a daughter, Emma D. Shadinger, a bequest of $2,000 is made. The balance of the estate is divided equally between the two surviving children.

There were eight other wills probated during the past two days at the office of the Register of Wills. Letters of administration were granted in three estates and inventories were filed in eleven estates. The business transacted was as follows:

Exchange Club Enjoys Outing On the River

A group of forty-eight men and women, members of the Exchange Club and their wives and friends, enjoyed a trip down the Delaware last evening on the launch, the "Louise C. Doron."

Leaving Bristol at 6.30, the group stopped at the Morelton Inn for dinner. The ride was resumed later in the evening the launch taking the group as far as the Bridesburg bridge. The party docked at Bristol about midnight.

A short business meeting was conducted upon the craft, with president William H. H. Fine, presiding. Outings of a similar nature were considered for the summer months. Definite action will be taken on these matters later.

Percy G. Ford led the party in a number of the club songs, which were thoroughly enjoyed. All participating reported a most enjoyable time, with the Delaware breeze making the ride a most pleasant one.

SAVE THE WOOD

There seems to be a large measure of good sense in maintaining a national committee on wood utilization in a country which admittedly is cutting its forest growth faster than it is replacing it. The people of the United States have the unenviable reputation of being the greatest wasters of wood in the world.

Several European countries whose civilizations date back centuries beyond ours, have learned the trick of producing the timber they need, exporting a good deal and still maintaining in perpetuity their natural forest resources. The United States, though faced with the inevitable disappearance of its forests, continues to waste timber as if the supplies were inexhaustible, just as China did.

The national committee of wood utilization is made up of representatives of many branches of industry interested in economical utilization of wood. They have a fruitful field for study.

In this country wood continually is wasted in nearly every industry in which it is used. Millions of feet go for containers to be used but once. Cars are lined with new lumber most of which is wasted as soon as the shipment reaches destination. Elaborate temporary structures precede building operations and are torn down and largely wasted when work is completed.

Much of this waste appears necessary in this country, but methods evolved in Europe have eliminated it. No European contractor builds scaffolds out of new material. English builders have poles and planks for scaffolding which they preserve with zealous care from generation to generation. And on an English building job there is hardly enough waste material at completion to make a respectable bonfire. A little more care in those matters in the United States would delay the day when prices make the use of wood impracticable.

SAD

Ever since a London editor remarked while on a visit to this country that the people of New York City appear to be a sad lot the New Yorker has wondered why he looks sad and the people in other American cities and towns have asked themselves if they too look sad, and if so, why.

The only explanation the Englishman could advance was the rather enigmatical assertion that it might be attributable to the large number of straw hats worn here.

Since he associates sadness with the straw hat at the fag end of the season it does occur to one that the fodder fedora does look more or less sad as the season wanes.

Unless American men covet this reputation of being sad and philosophical—sadness being a concomitant of thoughtfulness—they will tant of thoughtfulness—they will of necessity have to emulate femininity and perspire all summer under fall and winter hats or more frequently patronize season's end straw hat sales and hat cleaners.

However sad the wearer might be, the representative straw hat in early September is far "sadder"; a fact discovered long before the arrival of the distinguished visitor from London.

Still, the basis of the old-fashioned school girl complexion was a five-mile walk to the schoolhouse.

Irony: 1—Razzing the younger generation. 2—Insisting that it get the world out of a mess left by its elders.

"TENDERLOIN," starring Dolores Costello, is a Warner Bros. picture-ization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
A satchel containing $200,000 has been stolen from the Mercer National Bank. Rose Shannon, escaping from the unrelenting attentions of Chuck White, finds the satchel in the street. A policeman arrests her on her way to return it. He takes Rose to the station. She is held as an accomplice when it is found that the satchel is empty. She is released a week later, but detectives trail her. Rose is met by Chuck, who on the pretext of befriending her takes her to the house of the Professor, leader of the gang of crooks involved in the robbery.

Perched on the long, carved table near the door leading into the Professor's private office, sat a girl, swinging her long, slender legs encased in sheer silk of the latest nude shade. Black patent leather shoes with thin spike heels gleamed in the soft illumination of the room. A squirrel coat, thrown back across the table, revealed a tight fitting dress of jade green, enhanced by numerous silver buttons down the front and along the sleeves. Heavy pendant earrings of emerald shone lustily against the yellowness of her heavy, bobbed hair.

"See anything yet?" Hemlinway

He pushed her through the door, closing it quietly behind her.

motioned for the Mug to draw back the curtain.

"Nope." The Mug peeped through the slit at the side of the window, and allowed the tapestry to fall back into place.

"So you think this dope about Sergeant Cassidy having a line on the right gang is all a frame?" The Professor turned to Maurey.

"I think so," Maurey nodded his head. "There have been no tip-offs; no one's come near the girl to do anything for her; the sergeant's working only on spec, but personally I think he's got the right idea. He's only letting the moll go so that he can tail her. The dolls won't lose a moment's time after she's out." He spoke in a cultured voice that seemed in strange keeping with the vernacular of the underworld.

"Well, we've got to beat them to it." The Professor began striding up and down the room again. "You think there's no doubt but that this girl knows where that money is? He stopped him pacing and stood in front of Maurey.

The stool-pigeon shook his head. "There are only two answers to that question," he replied. "Either the girl knows, or the person who planned the stick-up." He looked at the Professor from beneath his half-closed eyes. There was something speculative about his glance, and the Professor turned uneasily. How much did Maurey know? The underworld's underground railway carried even unspoken thoughts at times.

"How long 've I gotta park around this joint?" The girl on the table raised, stretching her legs.

"You'll be through soon enough," the Professor answered briefly, resuming his pacing.

The girl yawned again, opened a large, square vanity case of green leather and held it up before her, scrutinizing herself in the mirror on the inside of the bag. She pulled out a large powderpuff, stained with rouge, shook it, filling the air with white dust, and applied it lavishly to her nose and chin. She wet her finger with her tongue and ran it over her eyebrows, and then moistened her carmine lips. Finally, she extracted a cigarette from her pack, lit it, and exhaled a white cloud of smoke.

"Hey! Dey're comin'!" The Mug, his eyes glued to a crack in the curtain, signalled to the others with a wave of the hand. Suddenly the entire room seemed to come to life—an unusual life for the shop that was known throughout the Tenderloin as a fence for only the highest grades of stolen property. The Professor donned a pair of horn-rimmed spectacles and picked up an old piece of carved ivory. With a quick gesture he slipped across the floor and threw open a door in the rear which led into a long hallway.

"Quick! The back way, Maurey!" He pointed down the corridor as the stool-pigeon slowly rose and made for the door. "Here you—Bobbie!" He beckoned to the girl, who jumped down from her perch, grabbing her hat, coat and bag. "Upstairs—you know the room." He pushed her through the door, closing it quietly behind her. "Sparrow—snap into it!" he ordered.

The Sparrow rose and began examining an old oil painting on the wall with most evident interest. He took it down, turned it over, looked for a signature.

"Dey're comin' in," Mug warned, as the click of the lock sounded. "Dick's across de street!" He turned quickly and stood beside the Sparrow. Together the two began playing their little game of art connoisseurs, while the Professor stood fondling the piece of ivory with loving care.

Rose and Chuck halted in the doorway, surveying this peaceful scene of collectors of the beautiful at work. It was all that Rose had expected. There was an air of peace and quiet about the place, and it had a sort of musty, dusty odor that rightfully belonged to such a shop. There, too, pattering around his collection was a gentle-looking elderly man with glasses. For a moment this elderly man stared, then he set down the piece of ivory and hurried forward, hitting his glasses up and allowing them to rest on his forehead.

"Why, my dear boy!" The Professor greeted Chuck affectionately. "I didn't expect you back so soon. And this is the little girl, eh?" He turned a fatherly gaze on Rose, smiling kindly.

"Yes, this is Rose Shannon, Uncle—the girl I told you about. This is my Uncle Robert, honey," Chuck introduced the two.

"I'm glad to meet you," Rose held out her hand, smiling up at the tall man shyly.

"And I'm glad to meet you, my dear," Hemlinway answered, taking Rose's hand in both his own, and patting it gently. "Chuck's already told me so much about you—but I see that he didn't half begin to do you justice."

"Oh, Professor," Rose laughed, looking up at Chuck diffidently. "My, but this is a lovely place." Her gaze wandered about the room, taking in the old tapestries, the fine pieces of carving, the delicately cut vases. "Why, there's Mr. Sparrow," she exclaimed.

At the sound of his name Sparrow turned and, at a sign from the Professor, came forward and shook hands with the girl. "Lo, kid," he greeted her. "Glad to see you ag'in. How are ya?"

"I'm all right, Mr. Sparrow, thank you," Rose nodded.

"And this, my dear," the Professor motioned for the Mug to join the group. "Is my old friend, Dr. Mukowski—another collector, like myself."

"Please 't meetcha." The Mug, following the lead of his companions, held out a thick, heavy paw and shook hands with the girl. "How do you do, Dr. Mu—Mu—Mug?"

"I'm afraid I can't say it," Rose laughed, embarrassed.

"Aw, dat's all right," Mug assured Rose heartily, backing away at a sign from the Professor, and taking up his study of the painting again.

"I guess we'll try to make that twelve-thirty train, Uncle," Chuck turned to Hemlinway. "That's about the best."

"It's five minutes past eleven, now," the Professor announced, drawing a large, gold watch from his pocket and holding it closer to his eyes to see the time. "Do you like the country, my dear?" he asked Rose.

"I just love it, Professor," Rose assented joyously. "I used to live in the country—before I came to New York. We had a farm, out in Iowa. It's been almost a year since I've been away. But I had to sell out, after my father died—there was no one but my mother and me. And then she died, and I've been all alone ever since. Oh, it'll be just like heaven to get back to green grass and trees and things again."

"Well, then, I'm sure you'll love my sister's place," the Professor responded heartily. "When Chuck told me about you, I decided right away that you—this—er—little away that you—a girl that a bit of farm life would do you a world of good. I suggested it to Chuck, and then we wrote my sister, and she'll be more than glad to have you both. She's alone a great deal of the time—she's been a widow for some years now."

"It sounds just wonderful," Rose breathed. "I can hardly believe it." (To be continued.)

Sheriff's Sale of Real Estate

By virtue of a writ of Venditioni Exponas to me directed, will be sold at public sale, on Friday, the 10th day of August, 1928, at 10 o'clock a. m. (standard time), at the Sheriff's Office, in the Borough of Doylestown, Bucks County, Pa., the following real estate, to wit:

ALL THOSE TWO CERTAIN MESSUAGES AND LOTS OF LAND situated in the Borough of Bristol, in the County of Bucks and State of Pennsylvania, bounded and described together as follows, viz:

CONTAINING twenty-seven feet and six inches in front or breadth on the northwest side of Cedar Street at the distance of twelve feet and six inches southward from Franklin Street at the corner of land on one side now or late of Rose Dougherty and on the other side of land now or late of the Estate of William Tyrol, deceased, and extending of the width of twenty-seven feet and six inches northwardly between parallel lines at right angles to Cedar Street and passing through the middle of the partitions separating the houses on these two lots from the houses on the two adjoining lots, one hundred feet to land now or late of Michael Dougherty.

BEING the same premises which Hugh Harkins, executor of the last will and testament of Daniel McGee, by indenture dated the 1st day of June, A. D. 1893, and recorded in the office for the Recording of Deeds, &c., in and for Bucks County at Doylestown, in Deed Book No. 261, page 103, &c., granted and conveyed unto the said Maria Geremia Seneca, wife of Ferdinand Seneca, in fee.

The improvements are a 2½-story frame house 12x30 feet containing two rooms on the first floor and two rooms on the second floor.

Seized and taken in execution as the property of Ferdinand Seneca and Maria Geremia Seneca, and to be sold by T. HART ROSS, Sheriff.

H. S. RENEWS RELATIONS WITH DOYLESTOWN HIGH

(By T. M. June)

According to arrangements made today between Carmon Ross, faculty representative of Doylestown High School, Thomas June, manager of the Bristol High School football team, and Kenneth L. Townsend, coach of Bristol High School, a football game will be played at Doylestown on October 20, 1928, and in the following year Doylestown will come to Bristol.

The placing of Doylestown on the local gridiron schedule means the renewal of relationship between the schools which disbanded several years ago. The two teams always gave each other a hard fight and something of the same is expected this year, although Doylestown has been considerably strengthened.

An attempt was made to place our old rivals, Burlington High School, on the schedule, but all plans fell through. Hopewell High School will open its relations here on November 2, 1928. Several other large schools are also on the schedule. Included in this list are Temple High, Springfield High, Ambler High, Mount Holly High, Berwyn High, Willow Grove High. Newtown may open the season here on September 21.

In a letter written to Thomas June, Coach Townsend said that he expects to put the squad to work on the opening day of school, as the schedule of eleven games is the longest a cardinal and gray team has ever faced.

At the present time, arrangements between the coach and student manager are being made to fill in the two open dates with two large Bucks county schools.

Under Love Ban

Ogden Goelet, young Harvard graduate, who it is whispered along Park avenue, was the subject of a recent tete-a-tete between his father and Miss Louise Groody, musical comedy star. Goelet pere is alleged to have declared his intention to cut off his son without a dollar in the event he married the pretty actress. She declined to discuss the story before she left for a vacation abroad.

Critically Ill

George Stallings, the "miracle man," who led the Boston Braves to a world's championship in 1914, lies dangerously ill in a Macon, Ga., hospital, whither his family has been summoned. Stallings is the owner of the Montreal club in the International League.

TUNNEY URGES OTHERS TO FORGET THE MONEY

By Davis J. Walsh

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
FAIRHAVEN, N. J., July 20.—Unless something happens in the next six days to re-hatch the plot considerably, they will be asking Gene Tunney to eat a better man than himself in at least several particulars when he steps in there next Thursday night to give his title a time exposure. The writer became convinced of this today after three days of Tunney and two of Heeney had afforded him a rather acceptable basis for comparison. Heeney looks the part of a better fighting man in quite some few considerations that essentially are fighting points.

In making this statement, I have considered the matter of physical condition, gameness, speed and ring sense, timing and accuracy, versatility of attack, ruggedness and strength and, finally mental attitude toward the situation in general. In the first two or three, Tunney is no more than Heeney's equal, in speed, boxing and instinctive reactions, Tunney is quite the better man; in the others it is my guess that he is Heeney's inferior.

It may come as a bit surprising that good, old Tomato is to be rated ahead in offensive finesse. But where is Tunney's versatility in this respect? In fact, where is his attack? Quite so, Armbruster, the bureau of missing articles was speaking about that just this morning.

Gene believes in adopting harsh measures only under provocation. That is, he will strike you only if you have at him first—the counter hitter always. Heeney may not have the hardest punch in the world but his offense is far from lacking in variety. One of its best features is a left hook to the liver, very effective and seldom inaccurate. He also works a left uppercut inside, for the information of those who have seen him only as a right hand hitter.

This, of course, is his best punch, delivered either to the body or head. Incidentally, he is a solid man on his feet, thereby differing from Dempsey who is geared high and, therefore, with his lack of speed, was easily buffeted off balance in his fights with Tunney.

In the matter of durability and strength, which are worthy of slight mention over fifteen heats, Heeney is far the better man. In hitting accuracy, he is the better man at this particular minute.

What Tunney is able to do about this in the short time at his disposal means everything to the result of the fight. For the Tunney who clipped Dempsey from one hand to another at Philadelphia couldn't miss beating Heeney; even the Tunney of Chicago would be a stand out. The trouble today is that the Tunney who is hasn't been the Tunney who was. He may catch up with himself in the next few days, in fact, to be reasonably sure of winning, he must do quite a bit of overtaking in this respect.

For, in truth, Tunney is very little of anything without timing. Take his accuracy away from him—the thing that keeps buffeting his man away long enough to enable him to circle and back-track—and you have a very ordinary fighter. He isn't particularly tough, although game enough, and he isn't a hitter.

—Miss Carrie Lyle, of Norristown, was a Sunday, Monday and Tuesday guest of her relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Kishpaugh, of 333 Hayes street.

Pittsburgh Advocates Airport For That City

derdice, president and treasurer of the Arch Machinery Company, and Attorney George R. Hann have taken 135 business and industrial leaders of Pittsburgh on a two-day tour to eastern airplane fields and factories.

In discussing the possibility of making "The Golden Triangle" an aviation center, Hann and Allderdice issued a statement in which they pointed out that Pittsburgh and this section of Pennsylvania is peculiarly situated to attract the industry. It is centrally located, has unexcelled railroad facilities, good labor conditions and is already an industrial center.

Hann and Allderdice pointed out that there are some 150 organizations manufacturing airplanes throughout the country and that the Department of Commerce has approved 40 types of airplanes. The demand for aircraft is now to the point where it exceeds the supply.

A survey which has been made by the airport commission revealed that during the year of 1926 there were approximately 1,000 airplanes manufactured in the United States. This figure increased to 6,000 in 1927 and at the close of the year there were unfilled orders on hand for 4,000 more planes.

This year during the month of January there were more airplanes manufactured than in the entire year of 1926.

Graham Riddles Smith Plea On Volstead Issue; Brands It Wild and Utterly False

Volstead act. Even if the act could be repealed, the situation would be actually discouraging and disheartening for those who want beer or stronger liquor in that way. The Constitutional Amendment would still stand as a bargain.

"No other legislation could be passed that would be constitutional until the Eighteenth Amendment itself would be repealed. The course of procedure to secure a repeal is very, very cumbersome and difficult.

"In the first place a bill or resolution must be introduced in one or both Houses of Congress. Then it would be referred to an appropriate committee. The probability is that it never would be reported out by that committee.

"If it were reported out favorably a vote of two-thirds of the members of both Houses would be required to pass and send the repealing resolution down to the States and then it would have to be ratified by three-fourths of the States before it could be effective.

"This proceeding would take years to carry through the ratification. Only thirteen States rejecting the resolution for repeal could effectively block it. The solid South could prevent repeal.

Congress alone and not the President can initiate proceedings for the modification of the Volstead act. The President has no legislative power. "While many would like to see some modification of certain things in the present law, we know that any modification can only be effected by Congressional legislation.

"The idea that Governor Smith, if elected, could bring about a change, and that beer or other liquors would in that event flow freely, is a wild and utterly false one. Some may be fooled by it and believe it, but no change can be made except in the way I have indicated."
